UPCOMING FORESTRY SCHOOL WORKSHOPS

The Vermont Woodlands Association invites you to attend their upcoming Forestry Schools targeted towards specific audiences of landowners and tree farmers. If you are a new or next generation landowner or if you just enjoy learning about management of our forest resource, then check out our workshops and register today.

Forestry School for the Next Generation Forest Landowners and Tree Farmers will be held on July 28 in North Clarendon, VT from 8:30am to 2:30pm. Do you know what your family wants for the future of your family land? Will you be ready to take the reins? As the stewards of our future, we want you to be excited about the forest legacy that the present generation will entrust to you. We'd like to help you prepare for protecting and stewarding our treasured forest resource so that it does not become just a memory. Regardless of age, take advantage of this opportunity to meet others and learn how you can be actively engaged in protecting your family's legacy. There is no charge for this workshop.

The Weekend Forestry School: How to Manage Your Forest will be held on September 29-30, 2012 in Groton, VT at the Seyon Lodge State Park. This two-day program will expand your knowledge of our forests and forestry in Vermont and help you become a good forestland steward. Using classroom discussion and field work participants are given hands-on opportunities and access to professionals who can answer questions. The cost is $100.00 per person (includes overnight accommodations and meals) or $75.00 per person for commuters.

Visit www.vermontwoodlands.org/forestry-school.asp to download registrations. Call 802-747-7900 for more information about upcoming events in your area. Sponsored by the Vermont Woodlands Association and the Vermont Department of Forests, Parks and Recreation. Vermont Woodlands Association is a membership organization of more than 1100 forest landowners who manage 350,000 acres of Vermont forests for wildlife, timber harvest, clean air and water, and recreation.
