Historical Land Use Change & the Wildlife of Vermont- a Presentation by Kim Royar

Tuesday, January 23, 2018 | 6:30-8:00pm
USDA Forest Service Office Conference Room,
231 North Main Street, Rutland, Vermont

Kim Royar, a biologist with Department of Fish and Wildlife will be presenting a program on land use change in Vermont and its effects on the state’s native wildlife populations. Join Royar as she walks through the history of land use in what is now Vermont from the time of the Native Americans to present. Kim will combine a mixture of history and biology to demonstrate the intersection between the two. She will discuss how human changes to the landscape influenced the wildlife that live in Vermont, particularly beaver, otter, coyote, bobcat, and wolf, etc.

This event is sponsored by the Vermont Woodlands Association. Registration suggested, but not required.
